ECCLESIASTICAL ESTABLISHMENT.

THE ecclesiastical establishment in India is described in the Analysis, page 331.

Bishop Middleton, who went to India in 1814, died at Calcutta on the 8th July 1822, and was succeeded by Bishop Heber, who reached Bengal in the month of October 1823. From the month of June 1824 to the end of that year, Bishop Heber was engaged in visiting the several European stations in Bengal and the upper provinces of Hindostan. In January 1825 he proceeded to the stations under the Bombay government, including Poonah, Kairah, Baroda, Baroach, Surat, and Guzerat. He subsequently visited Ceylon, and returned to Calcutta, from whence in 1826 he proceeded to Madras and Trichinopoly. At the latter place, on the morning of the 3d April, his Lordship was seized with an apoplectic fit, on entering a bath which had been prepared for him, and falling forwards into the water in a state of insensibility, was speedily suffocated.

The Rev. Dr. James was appointed to the bishopric in April 1827. His Lordship sailed for India in the ship Mary Anne, in June following.

The Rev. William Hawtayne succeeded the Rev. John Barnes as archdeacon at Bombay, in May 1826. The Rev. E. Vaughan resigned the archdeaconry of Madras in 1828. His successor is not yet known.

INSOLVENT DEBTORS.

VARIOUS acts have been passed from time to time for the relief of insolvent debtors in England and Ireland. Many of the extensive provisions in favour of the debtors were found to be extremely prejudicial to the interests of the creditors, and led to the presentation of numerous petitions to Parliament, praying some revision of those laws. A committee of the House of Commons was accordingly appointed in March 1819, to take into consideration the state of the law, and the several acts passed in the 53d, 54th, and 56th years of his late Majesty's reign.

The committee made their report in the month of May, and stated that, in submitting the result of their inquiry, they felt called upon, in the first place, to express their most decided approbation of the principle on which they conceived the laws for the relief of insolvent debtors were founded: the principle being, that a debtor ought to be released from custody on making a bonâ fide division of all his property amongst his creditors, except in cases where the conduct of the debtor appears to have been fraudulent. In the month of January last a draft of a bill which had been sent home by the judges in India, was transmitted to the Court of Directors by Mr. Williams Wynn, and referred by the Court to the Company's law officers, for the purpose of their reporting on the measure generally, as applicable to India. The most anxious attention was given to the subject, and as it was proposed to incorporate some of the provisions of the bankrupt act, the opinions of professional gentlemen immediately connected with the practice of the insolvent court and that of bankrupts, were taken on the various points contemplated in the proposed bill, which was sufficiently matured to enable Mr. Williams Wynn on the 22d May, to give notice to the House of his intention to move for leave to bring in the same, which leave was obtained on the 4th June, when when Mr. Wynn pointed out the urgent necessity that existed for such a measure, and the great difficulty frequently occasioned by the existence of settlements, or sometimes merely factories, belonging to other powers, in the centre of the British territories. Thither no writs of course run, and a debtor has only to escape there and he may set his creditors at defiance. It was therefore proposed, among other numerous provisions, that this absconding should of itself be considered as an act of bankruptcy, and that it should be in the power of the court to treat the party escaping as an insolvent debtor, and to direct an assignment of his property for the benefit of his creditors. The bill was passed into an act on the 19th July 1828.

After reciting that divers good laws have of late years been established within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland for the relief of insolvent debtors, and that it is right that relief should be given also to insolvent debtors in some parts of the East-Indies, it proceeds to enact, that there shall be holden within the respective limits of the towns of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, separate courts for the relief of insolvent debtors, at Calcutta once a month at least, and at Madras and Bombay as often as necessary; such court to be held before one of the judges of his Majesty's Supreme Courts at those presidencies, the practice of which courts is then provided for with a great deal of minute detail, founded chiefly on the provisions of the acts passed for the same purpose, with reference to this country. The act contains one class of provisions quite peculiar to itself: it declares the adjudication of an act of insolvency in India to be evidence of an act of bankruptcy, on which a commission may be sued out here, and proceeds to lay down with much care and precision the course of proceeding to be adopted, with a view to the affording equal justice to the English and the Indian creditor.

The principal officers of the respective courts for the relief of insolvent debtors, are to cause notices to be inserted in the gazettes of the several presidencies, of every petition for relief under this act, and of every adjudication of an act of insolvency, and the chief secretary of the government is to transmit to the Court of Directors, without delay, two or more copies of such gazette which shall contain any such notice, who without delay, after after the receipt, are to cause notice to be inserted in the London Gazette.

It would be foreign to the purpose of this work to enter minutely into the details of the provisions of the bill in question, but there is no doubt that their practical utility will justify the great pains and labour which have been bestowed upon them, and that they will be found to give to India most, if not all of the benefits of the bankrupt laws, without the accompaniment of their cumbrous and expensive machinery.

L A W.

(42) And be it further enacted, that every such assignee as aforesaid shall, with all convenient speed, take possession, by himself or by means of messengers of the court, or by other fit and proper persons, of all the real and personal estate and effects of the insolvent of which immediate possession may be obtained, and shall use his or her best endeavours to seize, obtain, recover, and reduce into possession as speedily as possible the rest of such estate and effects, and all debts, claims, and choses in action which by such assignment he shall have been empowered to obtain, recover, and get in.

Assignees may make Composition.

(46) And be it further enacted, that after the hearing of any such petition and schedule as hereinbefore mentioned, it shall be lawful for the assignee or assignees, by and with the approbation of such court, and by and with the consent of any creditors whose claims after such hearing shall appear to amount to more than half of all the debts due from the insolvent to persons resident within the British territories in the East-Indies, to take such reasonable part of any debts due to the petitioner or petitioners, as may by composition be gotten, in full discharge of such debts, and to submit to arbitration any difference or dispute between the assignee or assignees, and any other person or persons, for or on account or by reason of any thing relating to the estate and effects of such prisoner.

Assignees may prosecute and defend Actions.

(47) And be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the assignee or assignees, by and with the like approbation and consent, to commence and prosecute or defend any suits or actions at law or in equity which the insolvent or insolvents might have commenced and prosecuted or defended, and to defray the costs to which he or they may be put in respect of such suits or actions out of the proceeds of the estate and effects of the insolvent or insolvents; and if there be any partner or partners of the insolvent or insolvents who hath not or have not joined in the petition, it shall be lawful for the court to authorize the assignee or assignees to join such partner or partners with himself or themselves as plaintiffs in such suit or action; and if such partner or partners shall execute any release of the debt or demand for which such suit or action is brought, the release shall be void: provided always, that such partner or partners, if he, she, or they shall take no part in the prosecution or defence of such suit or action, shall not be liable to pay costs in respect of the same.

Assignees may execute Powers vested in Insolvents.

(48) And be it further enacted, that all powers vested in any such insolvent or insolvents as are afore-mentioned, which he, she, or they might lawfully execute, for his, her, or their benefit, might be executed by his, her, or their assignees, for the benefit of his, her, or their creditors.

(49) And be it further enacted, that from time to time as possession is obtained of any of the estate or effects of any insolvent or insolvents, the assignee or assignees shall with all convenient speed make sale of the same; subject nevertheless to the direction and control of the court by authority of which he or they shall have been appointed, in case any application shall be made to such court by any insolvent, or any creditor or mortgagee, in all which cases such court shall have full power and authority to delay or postpone the sale of any property, and to make such other order regulating the same as to such court shall seem meet.

Court may defer Sale of Property.

(50) And whereas the insolvents may be entitled to annuities for their own lives, or other uncertain interests, or to reversionary or contingent interests, or may have made advances of money for the cultivation of lands, or may be interested in property in other ways, in which the immediate sale thereof for payment of their debts may be very prejudicial to them and to their creditors, and it may be proper in some cases to defer the sale of such property, and to put it under temporary management, or to authorize the raising of money by way of mortgage for payment of the debts or part of the debts of an insolvent, and for defraying the expenses attending the execution of this act, instead of selling for such purpose; be it enacted, that in all such cases it shall be lawful for the said courts for relief of insolvent debtors at any time to take into consideration all circumstances affecting any property of the prisoner which shall have been assigned under the provisions of this act; and if it shall appear to any such court that it would be reasonable to make any special order touching the same, it shall be lawful for such court so to do, and to direct that so much of the said property as it may be expedient not to sell immediately, according to the provisions of this act, shall not be so sold, and from time to time to order and direct in what manner such property shall be managed, for the benefit of the creditors of such insolvent, until the same can be properly sold, or until payment of such creditors be effected, according to the provisions of this act, and to make such order touching the sale or disposition of such property as to such court for relief of insolvent debtors may seem reasonable and beneficial, and upon such terms and conditions, with respect to the allowance of interest on debts not bearing interest, or other circumstances, as to such court shall seem just; and if it shall appear that the debts of any such insolvent or insolvents can be discharged by means of money raised by way of mortgage on any of the said property of the said insolvent or insolvents, instead of raising the same by sale, it shall be lawful for the said court so to order, and to give all necessary directions for such purpose, and generally to direct all things

Assignees to render Accounts.

(51) And be it further enacted, that the assignee or assignees of all such insolvents as are hereinbefore mentioned shall keep accounts of the property, debts, and credits of such insolvents, whether belonging or due to or from such insolvents solely, or jointly with any other person or persons, wherein they shall enter all property of the insolvents received by them, and all payments made by them; which accounts any creditors may inspect at all seasonable times; and it shall be lawful for the courts for the relief of insolvent debtors at all times to summon the assignees before them, and require them to produce all books, papers, deeds, writings, and other documents in their possession, which in any way relate to the petition of the insolvent or insolvents; and if such assignee or assignees so summoned shall not come before such courts respectively at the time appointed, or shall not bring with him or them such documents as are afore-mentioned, it shall be lawful for such courts respectively to issue attachments, and to cause such assignee and assignees to be brought before them, and to commit such assignee or assignees to prison until he or they shall submit to the court by which he or they shall have been summoned.

Court to declare Dividends.

(52) And be it further enacted, that whenever it shall appear by the accounts of any assignee or assignees that a dividend may be beneficially made amongst the creditors, it shall be lawful for any court for the relief of insolvent debtors to summon before it the assignee or assignees, and to direct that such public notice as to the court may seem meet shall be given of a further hearing of the petition on a day certain, for the purpose of making a dividend; and on the day so fixed the insolvent or insolvents, and assignee or assignees, and any creditors who shall be willing to do so, shall attend the court, and all objections to the schedule of the insolvent or insolvents, and to the accounts or conduct of the assignees, and any claims of any creditors which shall not have been previously determined, shall be then heard and determined, either by such court immediately, or upon a reference to the examiner or other proper officer of such court; and it shall be lawful for such court to examine the insolvent or insolvents, assignees, and any witnesses, on oath, and either at that time to declare a dividend, and to direct that the same shall be paid by the assignee or assignees, or to postpone such declaration and direction of the same until a further hearing, and to make such order in the matter of the petition, and respecting the same, as shall be most conducive to the attainment of the benefit intended by the several provisions of this act.

(55) And be it further enacted, that if any creditor whose claim shall have been established in any court for the relief of insolvent debtors shall not appear, by himself, his attorney or agent, at the making of any dividend, nor shall make application to receive his, her, or their share thereof, the assignee or assignees shall certify the same to such court at its first sitting after the making of the dividend; and it shall be lawful for the court to direct in what manner, and by whom, and upon what conditions, the money so due to such creditor or creditors shall be kept for or paid to him, her, or them, or to his, her, or their lawful constituted attorney.

insolvent ; or made away with, charged, mortgaged, or concealed any part of his or her property, of what kind soever ; then it shall and may be lawful for such court to adjudge that such insolvent shall be so discharged, and so entitled as aforesaid, so soon as he or she shall have been in custody, at the suit of some one or more of the persons as to whose debts and claims such discharge is so adjudicated, for such period or periods, not exceeding three years in the whole, as such court shall direct, to be computed from the date of his or her petition.

(58) And be it further enacted, that in case it shall appear to any such court that such insolvent shall have contracted any of the debts fraudulently, or by means of breach of trust, or by means of false pretences, or without having any reasonable or probable expectation, at the time when contracted, of paying the same ; or shall have put any of his or her creditors to any unnecessary expense, by any vexatious or frivolous defence or delay to any suit for recovering any debt or any sum of money due from such insolvent ; or shall be indebted for damages recovered in any action for criminal conversation with the wife or for seducing the daughter or servant of the plaintiff in such action, or for breach of promise of marriage made to the plaintiff in such action, or for damages recovered in any action for a malicious prosecution, or for a libel, or for slander, or in any other action for a malicious injury done to the plaintiff therein, or in any action of tort or trespass to the person or property of the plaintiff therein, wherein it shall appear, to the satisfaction of such court, that the injury complained of was malicious ; then it shall and may be lawful for such court to adjudge that such insolvent shall be so discharged and so entitled as aforesaid forthwith, excepting as to such debts, sum or sums of money, or damages as above mentioned ; and as to such debt or debts, sum or sums of money, or damages, to adjudge that such insolvent shall be so discharged and so entitled as aforesaid, as soon as he or she shall have been in custody, at the suit of the person or persons who shall be creditor or creditors for the same respectively, for a period or periods not exceeding two years in the whole, as such court shall direct, to be computed as aforesaid.

Court may order Costs.

(59) And be it further enacted, that whenever any creditor or creditors opposing such insolvent's discharge shall prove, to the satisfaction of any such court, that such insolvent has done or committed any act for which upon such adjudication as aforesaid he or she may be liable to remain in such custody as aforesaid for a period not exceeding three years, to be computed as aforesaid, such court shall adjudge the taxed costs of such opposition to be paid to such opposing creditor or creditors, out of the estate and effects of such prisoner, by his or her assignee or assignees, before any dividend made thereof ; and in all other cases of opposition to an insolvent's discharge being substantiated or effectual, it shall be lawful for such court to adjudge in like like manner, if it shall seem fit; and that in case it shall appear to such court that the opposition of any creditor to any such insolvent's discharge was frivolous and vexatious, it shall and may be lawful for such court to award such costs to such insolvent as shall appear to be just and reasonable, to be paid by the creditor or creditors making such opposition, which shall be paid accordingly.

Court to make Order pursuant to Adjudication, and issue Warrant.

(60) And be it enacted, that where, in the matter of any such petition heard before any such court, any adjudication shall have been made by such court for discharge of any insolvent, order shall be made accordingly by the said court in pursuance of such adjudication, and such court shall also issue a warrant or warrants to the gaoler accordingly, ordering the discharge of such insolvent from custody as to the detainers under which he or she shall then be confined, or which shall be lodged against him or her before he or she shall be out of custody, the same being for debts in respect of which such adjudication shall have been made; and that every such order of adjudication shall take effect, as from the day on which the adjudication shall have been made in that behalf; and that every such adjudication, and certificate thereof, and order thereupon, may be made without specifying therein any such debt or debts, or sum or sums of money, or claims as aforesaid, or naming therein any such creditor or creditors as aforesaid, excepting so far as shall be necessary in any case in order to distinguish between the creditors as to whom any such insolvent may be adjudged to be so discharged and entitled as aforesaid forthwith, and the creditors as to whom he or she may be adjudged to be so discharged and entitled at some future period: provided, nevertheless, that in all cases the detainer or detainers with respect to which any such insolvent shall have been adjudged to be discharged out of custody, he or she being then in custody thereupon, shall be specified in the warrant of such court to be delivered to the gaoler in that behalf.

Adjudication and Order to be final, unless obtained on false Evidence, &c.

(61) And be it further enacted, that every such adjudication for discharge of any insolvent as aforesaid by any such court as aforesaid, and the order thereupon, so made as aforesaid, except in cases of appeals, shall be final and conclusive, and shall not be reviewed by such court, unless such court shall thereafter see good and sufficient cause to believe that such adjudication has been made on false evidence, or otherwise improperly made, or fraudulently obtained, in which case it shall and may be lawful for such court, upon the application of such insolvent, or of any creditor of such insolvent, to order such insolvent, upon due notice, to be given to such persons and in such manner as the said court shall direct, to attend

or to be brought up, and the said matter to be reheard before the said court, who shall thereupon rehear the same, and shall and may, if just cause shall appear, annul the original adjudication and order thereupon made in such case, and shall have the same powers and authorities upon such rehearing as upon any original hearing in pursuance of this act, and may adjudicate in such matter accordingly: and thereupon, in case the former adjudication in the said matter shall not be confirmed, such order, certificate, and warrant shall be made as required by this act, to be made upon such original adjudication; and the said court shall and may, if necessary, remand the said insolvent to the same custody in which he or she was at the time of the former hearing, there to be subject to imprisonment as if the former adjudication therein had not been made; and thereupon all detainers which were in force against such insolvent at the time of his or her former discharge from custody shall be deemed to be still in force against him or her, as if such former adjudication had not been made; and the gaoler and keeper of the prison to which such insolvent shall be so remanded shall, and is hereby required to receive such insolvent into his custody, in pursuance of such remand, for doing which the order of remand in such case shall be his sufficient warrant; and where in any case such insolvent shall refuse or neglect to appear before such court, according to such order for rehearing as aforesaid, a copy whereof shall have been duly served on such insolvent, it shall and may be lawful for such court to order such insolvent to be apprehended, and committed to custody to such prison, and to issue its warrant accordingly, and to cause such insolvent to be brought up for examination as often as to such court shall seem fit; provided always, that where upon such rehearing it shall appear to such court that such insolvent is not entitled to the benefit of this act until some future period, according to the provisions herein contained, the said court shall and may, if it shall appear reasonable, adjudge the discharge of such insolvent at such future period, to be calculated without including the time during which such insolvent shall have been out of custody since the time appointed for his or her discharge by such former adjudication as aforesaid.

Insolvent may, after Discharge, be examined as to the Estate and Effects.

(62) And whereas the estate, both real and personal, of any person whose discharge has been adjudicated under this act, may not be sufficiently described or discovered in his or her schedule so sworn to as aforesaid, or the assistance of such person may be necessary to adjudge, make out, recover, or manage his or her estate and effects, for the benefit of his or her creditors; be it therefore enacted, that it shall and may be lawful to and for the assignee or assignees of the estate and effects of any such person whose discharge charge shall have been adjudicated under this act, in case such person shall, upon application to him or her for that purpose, have refused or neglected to give the necessary information, from time to time, to apply to the court by which any such adjudication shall have been pronounced, that such person may be further examined as to any matters or things relating to his or her estate and effects by such court; and thereupon, and also in case such person shall neglect or refuse to appear before such court at such time and place as shall be directed by such order, or appearing shall refuse to be sworn, or to answer such questions as shall be put to him or her relating to the discovery of his or her said estate and effects, then and in any of such cases it shall be lawful for such court, by warrant, to commit such person to gaol, there to remain without bail or mainprize until such time as he or she shall submit himself or herself to the order of such court in that behalf, and shall answer upon oath or otherwise, as shall be required, to all such lawful questions as shall be put to him or her, in pursuance of the same, for the purposes aforesaid.

Court may in certain Cases discharge Insolvent from Liability as to Debts specified.

JURIES.

IN 1826 Mr. Williams Wynn introduced the Bill which was passed into the Act 7th Geo. IV. cap. 37,* to regulate the appointment of Juries in the East-Indies; the rules and regulations as to the qualification, appointment, form of summoning, challenging, and service of jurors, were passed in pursuance of the provisions of the Act by the Supreme Court of Judicature at Calcutta, on the 29th December 1826.

On the 22d May 1828 Mr. Hume presented to the House of Commons, a petition from certain Hindoos, Parsees, Cingalese, and Mahomedans, native inhabitants of the island of Bombay, objecting to the clause which enacts, that grand juries, and all juries for the trial of persons of the Christian religion, shall consist solely of individuals professing the Christian faith. After a remark from Lord Ashley, that much caution would be requisite in effecting such an essential change as the petitioners prayed for, the petition was brought up, read, and ordered to lie on the table.

On the same day Mr. Hume moved for a copy of the regulations adopted by the Supreme Courts in India, as to natives serving on juries under the 7th Geo. IV. cap. 37. Mr. Hume pressed upon the house the expediency of admitting natives to serve on grand juries, and suggested the propriety of removing the disabilities attaching to them as soon as possible.

Lord Ashley observed, that no official report has yet been received from India respecting the admission of the natives to serve on juries. The only regulations which had reached this country were from the Supreme Court at Calcutta, those should be laid before the house, they had been submitted for the approbation of the King in Council, and it was probable that the other courts were waiting the result before they adopt them.

Mr. Williams Wynn remarked that, with the exception of the the petition submitted by Mr. Hume, there was no complaint on the part of the natives. At one time it did appear to him desirable that the natives should be allowed to serve on grand juries, but he had altered his opinion when he reflected what very different ideas prevail amongst them. He would rather allow the experiment already made to take its course, and if it succeed, afterwards extend it. It will be safe and easier to do so hereafter, than at once to carry it to the full extent, and have subsequently to retrace our steps. After some observations from Mr. Fergusson and Mr. Forbes, who both bore strong testimony to the respectability of the natives, the motion was agreed to. The Regulations follow the Act.

(1) All men who on any former occasion have served on Juries in the Supreme Court, and all who are resident householders within the town of Calcutta, and occupy any house or tenement of the monthly value of fifty rupees, or of the annual value of five hundred rupees, or whose property or interests in lands, tenements, or goods would be worth the sum of five thousand rupees, after the payment of their just debts, are qualified and liable to serve on juries in the Supreme Court, except such persons as are hereinafter excepted.

(2) Those persons are incapable of serving on Juries in the Supreme Court who hold any office in or under the said court, or receive or seek to receive any pay or emolument for any employment in or under the said court, or under any officer thereof, or for executing any duties of police within the town of Calcutta, or who are the subjects of any foreign state, or who are under the age of twenty-one years, or who are attainted of treason or felony, or who have been convicted of any fraudulent or infamous offence without having obtained a free pardon, or who are under outlawry or excommunication, or who are lunatics or idiots, or who are unable to read, write, and understand the English language: and inasmuch as there are parts of the proceedings upon trials in the Supreme Court which have not usually been translated by the interpreters, and which could not be translated without great difficulty and inconvenience, the sheriffs and clerks of the crown are forbidden to insert in their lists the names of any natives of whose competence to understand the English language they have not experience or sure knowledge.

(3) No person who does not profess the Christian religion is qualified fied to serve on any grand jury, or on any jury for the trial of a person who does profess that religion.

(5) All covenanted servants of the Honourable Company's civil service; all persons who according to the usage of England are entitled to the style and addition of esquire, or of any higher degree, or who shall be described in the lists hereinafter mentioned as merchants or bankers; all persons whose claims to the title of rajah, or to have about them any insignia of equivalent rank, have been formally acknowledged by the government, or whose rank or superiority of caste, according to the usage of their tribe or religion, would prevent them from sitting on common juries, or whose property or interest in lands, tenements, or goods would be worth two hundred thousand rupees after the payment of their just debts, shall be exempted from serving on any other than special or grand juries; provided always, that if any person who is entitled to this exemption shall be willing to waive the same, and to serve on common juries, an entry to that effect shall be made in a separate column upon the lists and book hereinafter mentioned, and the party shall be deemed to be qualified and liable to serve both on special and on common juries.

(6) In the months of January and February in every year, the sheriff and clerk of the crown shall, by all lawful means, make inquiry throughout the town of Calcutta, and shall severally prepare, to the best of their ability, knowledge, information, and belief, full and accurate lists, in alphabetical order, of all persons who are qualified and liable as aforesaid to serve on juries; and such lists, according to the form of the schedule annexed to these rules, shall contain in separate columns opposite to each person's name, his proper style, addition, or calling, his place of residence, the country of his birth, his religious profession, and his qualification to serve on juries, and the ground of his privilege, if any, to serve on grand or special juries only ; provided always, that in stating the religious profession of any person, it shall be sufficient to say Christian, Mahometan, Hindu, or the like, without specifying the particular church or sect of the party.

(7) The sheriff and the clerk of the crown on the first day of March, unless it happen on a Sunday, and then on the following day, shall deliver to the Supreme Court, or to the chief justice, or, in his absence, to the senior judge, their several lists so made as afore-mentioned, signed by themselves ; and the same lists, after inspection by the court or judge, shall be redelivered as soon as conveniently may be to the clerk of the crown, who shall compare the two lists, and if need be, shall make further inquiry, and before the end of the month of March shall make out one fresh list in alphabetical order, and in similar form to the two first, which fresh list he shall sign and attest with his hand and seal, as a true and perfect list, according to the best of his knowledge, information, and belief, of all persons qualified to serve as jurors in the Supreme Court, and shall cause the same to be published twice in the month of April, in the government gazette, or some other newspaper published in Calcutta.

(8) The clerk of the crown on every day in the month of May in which any judge shall sit in chambers, shall attend at the court-house with the last-mentioned list, and every person whose name is improperly inserted or omitted, or who is wrongly or defectively described, may apply, or in case of any such person neglecting or refusing to comply, the clerk of the crown may apply to the sitting judge, who either on the oath of the party himself, or of the clerk of the crown, or on examination of witnesses, may order the list to be corrected by the clerk of the crown ; and in case of any such correction having been made, the list shall be recopied and finally perfected and attested by the clerk of the crown, and once more published in the Government Gazette, or some other paper, in the first fortnight of the month of June.

(9) The clerk of the crown shall place the said last-mentioned list amongst the records of the Supreme Court, and shall cause the same to be fairly and truly copied in the same form in a book, and before the end of the month of June shall deliver the said book to the sheriff, who on quitting his office shall deliver it to the succeeding sheriff ; and excepting such alterations as at any time, upon motion in open court, may be directed by the court to be made in it, the said book, so prepared in each year as aforesaid, shall, from the 1st of July in the same year, for twelve months next ensuing, be deemed and taken to be a true list of all persons qualified and liable to serve on juries in the Supreme Court, and the same persons shall be summoned to serve as jurors, and no other ; and the Supreme Court, by virtue of its authority under the IV. XIX. and XXXIX. clauses of the letters-patent of the 26th March 1774, and according to the exigence of the aforementioned act of the seventh year of the reign of his present Majesty, Majesty, intituled, "an Act to regulate the Appointment of Juries in the East-Indies," and with a reference to the provisions of another act passed in the sixth year of the reign of his present Majesty, intituled, "an Act for consolidating and amending the Laws relative to Jurors and Juries," requires of all justices of the peace, and constables and other officers employed in the conservation of the peace, and of all persons having in their keeping or possession any public books of assessment or registry, that for the purpose of enabling the sheriff and clerk of the crown to form and perfect the aforementioned lists, they be aiding and assisting unto them.

(10) The sheriff, out of the names contained in the book aforementioned, shall summon for each sessions thirty-six of those who are qualified and liable to serve on grand juries, and sixty of those who are qualified and liable to serve on petit juries, and every summons shall be served one week at least before the first day of the sessions at which the party summoned is to attend: and of each of the panels returned by the sheriff, one-half at least must be of that class of persons who have heretofore been designated in the statutes relating to India by the term "British subject," and in like manner one-half of the jury shall in every case consist of such British subjects.

(11) Upon motion made on behalf of the king or of any prosecutor or defendant after issue has been joined upon any indictment or information for any misdemeanor, the court, if the case shall appear to require it, will order a special jury to be struck before the clerk of the crown, and for this purpose the sheriff or under sheriff shall, within ten days after the delivery of the juries book for the current year, to either of them, take from such book the names of all men who shall be described therein as liable to serve on grand or special jurors only, and shall cause the names of all such persons to be fairly and truly copied out in alphabetical order, together with their respective places of abode and additions, in a separate list to be subjoined to the jurors book, which list shall be called "the Special Jurors List," and shall prefix to every name in such list its proper number, beginning the numbers from the first name, and continuing them in a regular arithmetical series down to the last name; and shall cause the said several numbers to be written upon distinct pieces of parchment or card, being all, as nearly as may be, of equal size; and after all the said numbers shall have been so written, shall put the same together in a separate drawer or box, and shall there safely keep the same; and whenever the court shall order a special jury to be struck, the clerk of the crown shall appoint a time and place for the nomination of such special jury, and a copy of the rule of the court shall be served on the under sheriff, and also on all the parties on whom it has been usual to serve the same in England; and the clerk of the crown, at the time and place appointed, being attended by the under sheriff or his agent, who are hereby respectively required to bring with them the jurors book and such special jurors list, and all the numbers so written.

written on distinct pieces of parchment or card as aforesaid, in the presence of all the parties, and of their attorneys (if they respectively choose to attend, or if the said parties or their attorneys, all or any of them, do not attend, then in their absence), put all the said numbers into a box, to be by him provided for that purpose, and after having shaken them together shall draw out of the said box forty-eight of the said numbers, one after another, and shall, as each number is drawn, refer to the corresponding number in the special jurors list, and read aloud the name designated by such number; and if at the time of so reading any name, either party or his attorney shall object that the man whose name shall have been so referred to is in any manner incapacitated from serving on the said jury, and shall also then and there prove the same to the satisfaction of the clerk of the crown, such name shall be set aside, and the said officer shall instead thereof draw out of the said box another number, and shall in like manner refer to the corresponding number in the said list, and read aloud the name designated thereby, which name may be in like manner set aside, and other numbers and names shall in every such case be resorted to, according to the mode of proceeding described for the purpose of supplying names in the places of those set aside, until the whole number of forty-eight names not liable to be set aside shall be completed; and if in any case it shall so happen that the whole number of forty-eight names cannot be obtained from the special jurors list in such case the clerk of the crown shall fairly and indifferently take, according to the mode of nomination heretofore pursued in England in nominating special juries, such a number of names from the general jurors book, in addition to those already taken from the special jurors list, as shall be required to make up the full number of forty-eight names, all and every of which forty-eight names shall in such case be equally deemed and taken to be those of special jurors; and the clerk of the crown shall afterwards make out for each party a list of the forty-eight names, together with their respective place of abode and additions, and after having made out such list, shall return all the numbers so drawn out, together with all the numbers remaining undrawn, to the under sheriff or his agent, to be by such under sheriff safely and securely kept for future use; and all the subsequent proceedings for reducing the said list, and all other matters whatsoever relating to special juries, shall be conducted in the same manner as in England; and the person or party who shall apply for a special jury, shall pay such fees for striking such jury as shall be prescribed by the court.

(12) When it shall appear to the court, or to any judge thereof in vacation, that it will be proper and necessary that some of the jurors who are to try the issue in any case should have a view of the place in question, in order to their better understanding the evidence that may be given upon the trial of such issues, in every such case the court, or any judge thereof in vacation, may order a rule to be drawn up, containing the terms usual in England, and also requiring, if such court or judge shall so think fit, the party applying for the view to deposit in the hands of the under sheriff a sum of money, to be named in the rule, for payment of the expenses of the view, and commanding special writs of venire facias, distringas, or habeas corpora, to issue, by which the sheriff to whom the said writs shall be directed shall be commanded to have six or more of the jurors named in such writs, or in the panels thereto annexed (who shall be mutually consented to by the parties, or if they cannot agree shall be nominated by the sheriff), at the place in question, some convenient time before the trial, who then and there shall have the place in question shown to them by two persons in the said writs named, to be appointed by the court or judge; and the sheriff shall, by a special return upon the same, certify that the view hath been had according to the command of the same, and shall specify the names of the viewers; and those men who shall have had the view, or such of them as shall appear upon the jury to try the issue, shall be first sworn, and so many only shall be added to the viewers who shall appear, as shall, after all defaulters and challenges allowed, make up a full jury of twelve.

(13) In all cases wherein the king is a party, notwithstanding it be alleged by them that sue for the king, that the jurors or some of them be not indifferent for the king, yet the inquest shall not remain untaken for that cause; but if they that sue for the king will challenge any of those jurors, they shall assign of their challenge a cause certain, and the truth of the same challenge shall be inquired of according to the usage in England, and it shall be proceeded to the taking of the same inquisitions, as it shall be found, if the challenges be true or not, after the discretion of the court; and no person arraigned for murder or felony shall be admitted to any peremptory challenge above the number of twenty.

(14) There shall be no award that any of the by-standers be sworn upon the jury in any case, except it be by consent of all the parties in the case.

(15) No verdict shall be set aside, or in any way affected, for any cause which might have been cause of challenge at the trial; nor shall any writ of attainder be prosecuted against any jury or jurors for their verdict, nor against any party who shall have judgment on such verdict; but any person who shall be guilty of the offence of embracery, and every juror who shall corruptly or wilfully consent thereto, shall be punishable as heretofore.

(16) At each sessions the clerk of the crown shall make a minute of the names of those who shall serve at such sessions, and immediately after shall give a copy of the same to the under sheriff; and no juror who has served shall be summoned again within twelve months, unless for want of other jurors.

(17) All those who shall be lawfully summoned to serve on juries, and shall wilfully neglect to attend, shall be punished as for a contempt, unless upon motion made it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the court that the name of the person ought to be erased from the sheriff's book, or that such a material alteration should be made in the entry thereof in the said book, as would have excused the party from attending in obedience to the summons.

(18) The sheriff and clerk of the crown shall not be answerable for any casual errors; but for wilful omission, false insertion or description, or vexatious summoning, they shall be punishable as for a contempt.

PARLIAMENT.

On the 16th March Mr. Williams Wynn obtained leave to bring in a bill for the appointment of parties as writers to India, although they may not have passed four terms at the College, as required by the 53d Geo. III. cap. 155. The same was passed into an act on the 26th May, the provisions of which were to continue for the term of three years from that date. Vide WRITERS.

Writers.

Permission was likewise given for the introduction of another bill, in order to remove doubts as to the payment of allowances of officers dying whilst absent from India. The same was passed into an act on the 26th May. Vide page 613 of the Analysis.

In the same month Mr. Wynn also brought in the JURIES IN INDIA bill, which passed into a law on the 5th May. Vide Juries.

Juries in India.

In the month of April another bill relating to the Company, viz. the East-India Naval Force bill, was brought in, to provide for the payment by the Company of any additional expense incurred on account of any naval force sent out to India on the requisition of the Court of Directors: it was passed into an act the 7th Geo. IV. cap. 52.

On the 9th May Lord John Russell presented a petition from Mr. J. S. Buckingham, in which that gentleman detailed the circumstances of his case, and represented the hardships and sufferings which he had experienced. He stated that his appeals for redress had hitherto been ineffectual; and he therefore implored the House to take his case into consideration, and grant him such relief as they might see fit. Lord John Russell stated that his original intention was to have moved that the petition be laid on the table, but in consequence of what had fallen in the course of the discussion, he moved to refer it to a Select Committee, which motion was carried by a majority of forty-three to forty. On the 11th, when Lord John Russell moved that the Committee be empowered to send for persons, papers, and records, Mr. Williams Wynn said that with great propriety he might move that the order made on the 9th instant be rescinded, upon the ground that there had been no notice of the motion which the noble Lord had carried: he however abandoned the intention, because the case was one in which an individual complained of having suffered great hardship. After observations from several members as to the regularity and fairness of the course which had been adopted, the names of Mr. Abercromby and Sir Charles Forbes were added to the Committee on the motion of Lord John Russell; when Mr. Wynn moved that Mr. Stuart, Colonel Baillie, Mr. W. Peel, Sir E. H. East, Mr. Ross, Lord G. Somerset, Mr. Wellesley, and Col. Lushington, be added to the Committee. This proceeding called forth some observations from Lord John Russell, who contended that it was not fair to introduce the names of a number of persons who had either places under the crown, or who were connected with the East-India Company; and remarked, "that the right hon. gentleman's ancestor, Mr. Speaker Williams, did he preside in the chair, would be ashamed of a Committee thus partially selected."

Mr. PEEL observed, that Mr. Speaker Williams would rather be ashamed of the manner in which the Committee had been selected on Tuesday, than of the addition proposed to be made to it.

The names proposed by Mr. Williams Wynn were then added to the Committee. In pursuance of an order of the Committee a large collection of papers, comprising the whole of the proceedings which had taken place on Mr. Buckingham's case, were prepared, and forwarded from the India-House on the 18th May. Parliament was dissolved on the 31st of that month.

Burmese Treaty.

On the 4th November the treaty of peace with the Burmese government was presented to the house, and ordered to lie on the table.

On the 27th November Mr. Williams Wynn gave notice of his intention, after the holidays, to submit motions of thanks to the army in India, for their services in Ava and at Bhurtpore.

On

On the 21st March a petition from the merchants of Bristol was presented, representing the distressed state of the several branches of the commercial and manufacturing interests, and praying that the house would consider the propriety of rendering the commercial intercourse between this country and its eastern dependencies as unrestricted as that which subsists with the most favoured of its colonies.

Petition from the Merchants of Bristol as to Indian Trade.

On the 22d March Mr. Hume moved that there be laid before the House a copy of the report from Sir Edward Paget, the commander-in-chief, to the Governor-General in Council at Calcutta, respecting the mutiny at Barrackpore, and the measures adopted to suppress it. The motion was negatived by 176 to 44.

On the 8th May the House of Commons voted thanks to the forces employed against Bhurtpore and in Ava.

On the 10th May further revenue accounts were presented.

On the 15th May Mr. Wolryche Whitmore, in pursuance of the notice given by him, moved for the appointment of a Select Committee to inquire into the trade between Great Britain and India. Mr. Whitmore had incidentally entered upon the subject on a former occasion, when he introduced a proposition for an equalization of the rate of duty on East and West-India sugars. On the present occasion he entered into a comprehensive view of the general commercial advantages which he conceived was to be derived from an extension of the trade of this country with India. The motion was seconded by Mr. Slaney.

Trade with India.

In the course of the discussion considerable stress was laid by other members, upon the expediency of repealing the high duty on East-India sugar. Mr. Huskisson, in expressing his conviction that the objects contemplated by Mr. Whitmore would be best attained by abstaining at present from an inquiry, which would be more beneficial at a future period, admitted that it was the interest and duty of a commercial country like this, to endeavour to open new channels and to afford new increased facilities to those that were already open :

but it was its duty likewise, in giving encouragement to individual enterprise and to new commercial speculations, to be cautious not to sanction any measure which might endanger or destroy established interests and rising institutions, especially institutions of our own creation, connected with our interests and specially entitled to our protection. It would readily be allowed that all extensive changes were attended with great difficulty, and should be proceeded in with circumspection and a due regard to other general interests already widely established, and that therefore whatever new measures or new systems were introduced, they should be regulated in such a manner as that, in endeavouring to effect improvements for some, no sacrifice of essential import should be required from others. Mr. Williams Wynn hoped, that as measures had latterly been taken with relation to the subjects adverted to, the motion would be withdrawn. Under an assurance that the subject was one which would receive due consideration at the hands of the right hon. gentleman, Mr. Whitmore withdrew his motion.

Duties on East and West-India
Produce.

On the 15th, 21st, and 30th, various petitions were presented to the House for equalizing the duties on East and West-India produce.

Papers as to Suttees.

On the 17th May, copies and extracts of various proceedings relative to the burning of widows on the funeral pile of their husbands were presented to the House, in pursuance of an order of the 21st February last.

Revenue Accounts.

On the 25th May the annual East-India revenue accounts were produced.

Appeals.

On the 2d June a return of all colonial or plantation and East-India appeals, and all appeals lodged between 1st January and 31st December in each year since 1814, disposed of and undisposed of, was laid before the House of Commons. Papers as to slavery were also presented to the House.

Motion to prevent Suttees.

On the 4th June Mr. Fowell Buxton gave notice of a motion for the 18th, to prevent the immolation of Hindoo widows.

Landed Property in India.

On the 21st June Mr. Fergusson submitted a motion regarding landed property in India, which owing to the late period of the session was withdrawn. It was brought forward in June 1828, and passed into a law on the 27th of that month. Vide REAL ESTATE.

On the 4th February sundry accounts relative to raw and thrown silks, also as to bandannoes, were ordered by the House of Commons.

On the 14th March regulations passed by the Indian governments were presented to the House.

On the 17th April an account of raw-silk sold at the East-India Company's sales for five years ending January last, was presented to the House.

Mr.
O'Reilly.

On the 18th April Sir James Mackintosh brought before the House the case of Mr. Miles O'Reilly, who claims reparation for mischief he states to have sustained from the Directors of the East-India Company. This case arises out of the insolvency of Mr. Ricketts, the late registrar of the supreme court at Madras, upon which subject a collection of documents were laid before the House on the 25th June and 7th July 1827.

Criminal
Law.

On the 22d May Mr. Williams Wynn gave notice of his intention to move, on the 3d June, for leave to bring in two bills, one for the extension of the late improvements in the criminal laws to India, and the other to extend the benefit of the insolvent act. The bills were brought in and read the first time on the 6th June, and were passed into a law on the 25th July.

Debtors in India.

Mr. Hume submitted a motion for a return of the number of persons confined for debt in the gaols at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, in each of the years 1826 and 1827, or either of them, stating the number of years each person has been in confinement, and whether at the suit of government or individuals; and at the same time stated that his object was, to induce both the House and the government to carry into effect those measures of redress which were necessary.

Mr. Williams Wynn observed, that he had already given notice of his intention to move for leave to bring in a bill for the relief of insolvent debtors in India. After some remarks by Sir Charles Forbes and Sir James Mackintosh as to the evils consequent upon imprisonment for debt in India, the motion was agreed to. The bills were introduced on the 6th June, and passed into a law the 13th and 25th July; vide INSOLVENT

On another motion made by Mr. Hume, a copy of the table of fees sanctioned by the courts, and charged by the officers of his Majesty's Supreme Courts of Judicature at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and Prince of Wales' Island, were ordered.

On the same day Mr. Hume presented a petition from certain native inhabitants of the Island of Bombay against the clause which enacts that all juries for the trial of persons of the Christian religion shall consist solely of individuals professing the Christian faith.

On the 4th June a motion was submitted by Mr. Hume, for a copy of the memorial presented by the merchants of London trading to India, in February last, to the Court of Directors of the East-India Company, respecting the stamp tax lately imposed in Calcutta on commercial transactions; and a copy of any answer from the court to that memorial, and for a return of the amount revenue received from stamps in India in the years 1823-4 and 1825-6, under certain heads, was agreed to. The said memorial and accounts were presented to the house on the 16th June.

Stamp Tax.

On the 10th June Mr. Astell obtained leave to bring in a bill for regulating the proportions of unclaimed prize-money acquired by soldiers or seamen in the East-India Company's service. The bill was brought in and read a first time the same day, and received the royal assent the 15th July.

Unclaimed
Prize

On the 16th June the Marquess of Lansdowne presented to the House of Lords a petition from the merchants, traders, and inhabitants of Calcutta, relative to the stamp duties imposed there by order of the government. His Lordship did not offer any opinion on the important legal question arising out of the complaints, or on that course of policy which the government of India, as he was bound to suppose on some sufficient authority, had thought proper to pursue. The petition having been read, Viscount Melville remarked that any observation which he might make, was not offered with any view to defend the authorities in Calcutta against any charge so far as regards the petition. What had been done was done under an act in the propriety of which he fully concurred. The legality, his Lordship contended, was founded upon the 53d of the late king, by which both duties and taxes are allowed to be imposed; and the Supreme Court had unanimously decided that the imposition was lawful. An appeal lies to the King in Council, who will of course either reverse or confirm it as the case may require. The power was known to be possessed by the government in India. The measure had been sanctioned by the Board when Mr. Canning was at its head; and as to the government having interfered to prevent the inhabitants from meeting to express their opinion, they had only obeyed the orders which they had received from home; and that Lord Petty himself, in 1806, when a member of the board, approved of instructions to the Bengal government to prevent any such tumultuous proceedings.

The Earl of Darnley considered the subject of the petition deserving attention.

The Marquess of Lansdowne admitted the legality of the act, but remarked that, with reference to the order to prevent such meetings being signed by a certain individual, such an argumentum ad hominem ought not to have been applied, as the party alluded to could only have signed it as an individual member of the Board. The petition was ordered to lie on the table.

On the 17th June Sir James Mackintosh presented a petition to the House of Commons on the same subject from the inhabitants of Calcutta, against the tax in question. On this occasion the right hon. and learned member entered into a general review of the comparatively disadvantageous circumstances under which the British inhabitants of Calcutta are placed; pointing out the impolicy of the measure, and deprecating the haste and little consideration with which subjects connected with India, and more especially at the several periods of 1773, 1783, 1794, and 1813, have been passed through Parliament.* The petition having been read, Sir James Mackintosh moved that it be referred to a select committee. Upon which Mr. Williams Wynn doubted whether, if a select committee was appointed, the objects enumerated in the speech of his right hon.

hon. friend could, in the slightest degree, be obtained. After adverting to several of the topics touched upon by Sir James Mackintosh, Mr. Wynn submitted whether it was possible, on so limited a question as that of the stamp regulation, to engraft the general extensive question of what restrictions are advisable on the commercial and other intercourse between this country and India. He did not think any inquiry was necessary into the subject of the petition, and saw no grounds which would warrant an examination of the question.

Petition
Stamp Tax.

Mr. Hume entered at considerable length into the subject, and animadverted upon the general system under which the affairs of India are administered. He believed the Directors to mean well, but said the system they follow is a bad one. Instead of following what he might call the golden rule of Buonaparte, the court reject every information except what comes to them through their own special sources. He also thought colonization might be permitted without fear.

Mr. Astell remarked, that the legality of the question was set at rest. As to the charge of the Directors not attending to private information, he felt that they would ill discharge their duty if they would proceed on such grounds. It is well known that nothing is either done or declined on private information. The Government of India as at present constituted he conceived to be the best that circumstances would admit, and the proof of its excellence is to be discovered in the gradual and progressive improvement of that country. As to a more extended resort to India of Europeans, the misfortune was that too many went out who had neither capital nor reputation to insure them a chance of doing anything else than ending their days in poverty.

As to the resort of persons to India, the principle on which many applications were refused was this, that the situations of clerks and others in mercantile houses were occupied by half-castes, and it would be hard that Europeans should infringe on their employment. Permission has been given on the application of any respectable responsible houses, and he might fairly say that in every instance in which it could be shewn there was a power of furnishing employment, licenses have been given. The local government has also granted many. The motion for a Select Committee was then withdrawn.

East-India Exports and Imports.—Accounts were ordered, “ shewing the real and official value of the exports from the United Kingdom to the East-Indies and China, together with the Mauritius, for the year ending 5th January 1828, specifying the respective quantity and value of each article so exported, distinguishing the East-India Company’s trade from the private trade.”

On the same day an account of the number of ships belonging to the British empire, distinguishing those belonging to the Mauritius, Bombay, and Calcutta, was laid before the House.

Mutiny Act
Bombay
Marine.

On the 30th June, on the motion of Mr. Astell, the act of the 4th Geo. IV. cap. 81, was read, and a bill was ordered to be brought in by Mr. Astell, Lord Ashley, and Mr. Williams Wynn, to extend the provisions of the East-India Mutiny Act to the Bombay Marine. The bill was brought in, read a second time on the 3d instant, and received the royal assent on the 19th July. Vide BOMBAY MARINE.

Silk Trade.

On the 14th July a petition was presented by Mr. P. Thompson from merchants trading to the East-Indies, praying that the duties on the importation of foreign silks might be kept at thirty per cent. after the 30th October next. On the same day a discussion took place on the proposition for continuing for another year the duties imposed by the act of 1826. It was contended by the opponents of the measure that a pledge was given that the duty should not exceed thirty per cent. A division took place, when the clause containing the present duties for another year passed by 37 to 34.

On the 18th July papers relating to infanticide were presented to the House of Commons.

PATRONAGE,

SALE AND BROKERAGE OF PROHIBITED.

PRIOR to the year 1809 the only laws relating to the sale and brokerage of offices were the act of the 12th of Richard II., which went to prevent the officers of justice appointing improper persons; and the act of the 5th of Edward VI., which prohibited the sale of those offices. In the course of the investigation which was instituted into the offices of the Commander-in-chief, in the month of February in that year, it was stated by a Mr. Donovan that he had offered a writership to India for £3,000. Mr. George Smith, one of the directors of the East-India Company, in consequence of such statement, moved on the following day (10th February) in his place in the House of Commons, for the appointment of a committee to inquire into the abuses of East-India patronage. The motion was seconded by the late Mr. Grant, then Deputy Chairman of the Court of Directors, who stated that nothing could be more satisfactory to the Court as a body than such an inquiry, and hoped it would be conducted in the purest and most impartial mode, and that none of those concerned in the interests of the Company would be appointed members of the committee. Mr. Smith said, that though it was usual for the mover to be one of the members of a committee, he begged on that occasion to be excused.

A committee of fifteen was immediately appointed by the house. The Court of Directors passed a resolution, that the Chairman of the Court should communicate to the Chairman of the said committee the earnest wish of the Directors to contribute all in their power to the prosecution of the investigation for which the committee of the House of Commons had been appointed, and to give the committee every information which the records of the Company enabled them to furnish, as well as to meet individually any inquiries which the honourable committee might judge fit to propose to them.

On the 23d March Mr. Bankes, chairman of the committee of the House of Commons, brought up the Report, which was ordered to be printed.

The committee stated: "It is a satisfaction, throughout the whole evidence, to remark nothing which traces any one of these corrupt or improper bargains to any Director, or induces a reasonable suspicion that it was done with the privity or connivance of any member of that court.

"If this House should in its wisdom adopt any legislative measures for the purpose of preventing all traffic in the disposal of offices under Government, it will, in the opinion of your committee, be proper to extend the same protection to patronage held under the East-India Company: but they see no reason to recommend any special or separate provisions as applicable to their case, judging that the East-India Company has within its own power the most effectual means for accomplishing that end."

In consequence of the practices disclosed in the course of the examinations by the House of Commons and by the Committee, Mr. Perceval, on the 27th March 1809, moved for leave to bring in a bill to prevent the sale and brokerage of offices. He stated that the practice consisted, not in the sale of offices by those who had the power to give them away, but in the arts of those who pretended to have influence over such persons, and issued public advertisements, giving occasion to the notion that these abuses prevailed to a much greater extent than they actually did. This was the description of abuse which the law had in contemplation. He had already mentioned that persons in a certain office who had carried on this trade were under prosecution. As there were several persons in that concern, they were prosecuted for a conspiracy; but if there had been only one individual, he did not see how the law, as it then stood, could have reached him. The material point would be to make it highly penal to solicit money for procuring offices, or to circulate any advertisement with that view. Such a circumstance would go farther than any other to check the the abuse. His object was not to trench on the exceptions to the sale of offices that were expressly admitted of. Leave was given to bring in the bill. On the 18th April Lord Folkstone submitted a motion to the House, for the appointment of a committee to inquire generally into the existence of corrupt disposal of offices in the State, &c. His Lordship thought it impossible, in reading the evidence of the East-India Committee, not to see that there were other abuses in the various departments of the State, and that those abuses were proceeding to a very great extent.

Mr. Perceval was of opinion that such an inquiry could not go to an investigation into the conduct of every individual who might have by chance been concerned in the disposal of any offices. There might be a variety of instances in which persons might have erected themselves into a sort of agency concern, misrepresenting themselves to be authorized by this person and the other who had power to dispose of offices, while with such persons they had no concern, and in this manner might procure money under the pretence of using their interest with the person who had the actual power of disposing of the office in question, while of this proceeding the person having the gift of the office was utterly ignorant. On the subject there was a bill before the House. He hoped it would be found adequate to every object which might seem to be required; at all events, it would be in the power of the House and of the noble Lord himself to consider how far it should be extended. He was therefore of opinion that, on the whole, the inquiry proposed would neither be beneficial nor politic. No particular statement of delinquency had been brought forward, and to a general statement the House could not listen, especially after the Parliamentary inquiry which had lately taken place.

Lord Henry Petty did not think that a prospective measure was all that was requisite; and though he agreed with the noble Lord who brought forward the motion in thinking that some further inquiry was necessary, he differed from him on the motion as worded.

He came down to the house expecting that the motion would be for a reference to a Committee to inquire into certain facts contained contained in the minutes of evidence, and pointed out by the House to the Committee to be by them inquired into. As the motion stood, however, it would be for every member of that Committee to suggest to the Committee what facts they should go into. This was a power which the noble Lord contended could not be given to any Committee, as the House was not entitled to part with any of the powers which it could exercise itself; and he submitted, if there was any power which it could delegate to a Committee, which would not be better exercised by the House itself. If he looked to the motion, it extended to every thing and to every department. He did not say that it would not be right that such investigation should take place if the particular facts to be inquired into, and on which the reference to a Committee was founded, were pointed out and referred to; but he could not agree to confide so general and extensive a power to any Committee. His Lordship was willing to support any specific motion founded on any specific fact developed in the minutes of evidence, whether the motion were made by the noble Lord or by any person else. He was disposed for inquiry of every kind; but when he looked to such instances as his memory furnished him with of the House instituting general inquiries, he could not forbear from thinking that they almost all proved abortive.

Mr. Tierney observed, that the object of the motion was no less than to arraign the whole system of the Government of the country through all its departments. He did not think that a motion of this vague and general complexion ought to be entertained. He admitted that where a specific case was stated, it would be disgraceful to the House to blink at it; but while the House attended, as it was bound to do, to the interest of the people, it would always recollect that it owed something to the government of the country. Was this a mode of proceeding which any one would venture to propose with regard to an individual? If not, why should a different principle be entertained with respect to the government? The noble Lord, he supposed, had some cases in contemplation, for he could not imagine that he would propose the appointment of a Committee without having something to lay before them. But why did he not tell the House what these cases were? He conceived it to be impossible to accede to a motion put in these general terms, embodying suspicion, as it were, against the whole of the government of the country. He differed from the gentlemen opposite on many important political subjects, but neither with respect to them, nor with respect to any man, could he agree to this vague sort of motion. He himself had been in office; he knew the responsibility attached to the situation, and was ready to meet any accusation if fairly stated. But this motion extended back—how far nobody knew—and was calculated to put all those who for a great number of years back had been employed in public situations upon their trial, many of whom were precluded, in the course of nature, from giving those explanations that might be necessary to defend themselves against charges, or to prevent suspicion. He did not wish to throw a veil over delinquency; all he wished was that the delinquency and the nature of the evidence should be stated; that the charges should be specifically mentioned, and the individuals named against whom they were to be preferred, and then the House would consider whether the motion was such as ought to be entertained. Even on the ground of precedent, he did not think that this was a proper mode of proceeding. His hon. friend (Mr. Whitbread) had said that the House might watch over the proceedings of the Committee. But the House could not know what the committee was about till they reported. He gave the noble Lord credit for the most honest and upright intentions; and after what had come to light, he could blame none for being desirous of inquiry; but the House ought not to depart from the ordinary grounds of its proceedings. The motion assumed that the government was corrupt through all its departments, and this without pretending to state any evidence. Even in the abuses that had been found to have been carried on in the patronage of the East-India Company, there was nothing that related to the public government of that department—nothing that was brought home to the House of Commons. The abuses at most reached only to the Court of Directors, who were governed by a separate law; and he was even surprised that a Committee on the abuses in the patronage of the Directors had been granted. These abuses were of a description amenable to law, and to this they ought ought to have been turned over. If any abuses had been discovered to have existed in the public government of the East-India Company, that, no doubt, would have been a proper subject of Parliamentary inquiry. In the minutes of evidence, the existence of abuses at the Horse-Guards had been made out; but this was the only point of which the noble Lord proposed to keep clear. His motion went to impute corrupt practices to the Admiralty, and every other department of the government, without shadow of evidence; and all were to be put upon their trial without any specific charge! He hoped the noble Lord would withdraw his motion, and put it in a different shape. He did not wish to protect delinquency, but he could not consent to put the whole government on its trial without a specific charge alleged.

Mr. Canning said, he fairly avowed that, on grounds which had been already stated, no apprehension of consequences, be what they might, could possibly induce him to vote for this motion. It was impossible, in his opinion, to do so in consistency with the duty which he owed to the house and to the country, and therefore it had his decided opposition. But in giving that opposition he did not wish to oppose specific inquiry into specific abuses. The course was to specify the abuse; to prove the charge, and then to proceed to punishment. But was there no mischief in allowing the opinion to go abroad, that there was a consciousness on all hands of such a rottenness in the practices of government for several years past, as justified the entertaining of such a motion as this, as justified the appointment of a committee which, as it would be unlimited in its retrospective powers, must afford but a very distant prospect indeed of future advantage? Was the motion founded on the idea that all public men ought to be objects of suspicion? Was it conceived that the indulgence and emoluments could be the objects of liberal men in aspiring to office? Were the anxieties, the severe duties of such situations considered? Were these things to be compensated by money? If there were any persons who could entertain such ideas of liberal men who aspired to office, it would be his pride to be an object of their suspicions. This he would say, that if the noble lord and his abettors succeeded in driving all liberal men from the pursuit of office, the cast of public public men must be a degraded cast, into which no honest man could, in consistency with his own reputation, enroll himself. These were the sentiments which he took the liberty to submit to the House. He could not, therefore, let out this wide wasting power which was claimed by the noble lord, a power which could not be allowed to exist, without creating suspicions of the most disgraceful nature, which it would be impossible to do away.

The motion was negatived by 178 to 38.

The bill brought in by Mr. Perceval was read a second time on the 21st April, on which occasion Lord Folkstone observed, that various exceptions were made in the bill to which he objected; but amongst others there was one more important than those to which he had alluded, more important because the attention of the house and of the country had been more particularly called to it, in consequence of the report of the East-India Committee that seats in Parliament were trafficked for.

Mr. Bankes said, the committee on East-India offices had not expressed any opinion that sales of offices in the service of the Company should be exempted from the operation of the bill, but only that there was no necessity for any separate and specific legislative measure applicable to the Company. They had done so the more particularly on this account, because the East-India Company were already armed with greater powers than those which the country possessed, the former being permanent while the latter was subject to change, and dismissal from office always following the one, whilst it was by no means a necessary consequence on the other. He believed it would be a long time before any abuses were again heard of in the patronage of the East-India Company. The bill passed into a law on the 20th June 1809.

The jealousy of the House of Commons was subsequently manifested at the possible appropriation of any East-India patronage to the attainment of seats in Parliament, in the debate on a motion submitted by Lord A. Hamilton on the 25th April, as to a writership having been placed at the disposal of Lord Clancarty for that purpose.

In the whole course of the proceedings above adverted to, there was not the shadow of an imputation cast on the Court of Directors, and although it was universally admitted that Mr. Thellusson's confidence had been abused, that gentleman, then one of the ex-Directors, lost his re-election to a seat in the court.

As Mr. Bankes had justly predicted in 1809, during a period of nearly twenty years, only two instances of abuse in the patronage of the Company have been heard of. The one, the receipt by Bascombe, the steward of Mr. Taggart, of the sum of £100, with the privity of his master, for a cadetship which Mr. Taggart obtained for a person of the name of Bennett, and for which Bascombe was tried and found guilty, and sentenced to pay a fine in May 1824. The other in the month of February 1827, when circumstances came to the knowledge of the Chairman, which induced a belief that a traffic either was pursued or pretended in East-India patronage: in consequence of which measures were taken which led to the discovery of facts placing the matter beyond a doubt. The Court of Directors, ignorant of those facts and regardless who might be concerned, empowered a Select Committee to follow up the investigation and to take the necessary measures for bringing the parties to justice. The result led to a prosecution in the Court of King's Bench against eight parties, one of them being a member of the Court of Directors. On the trial which took place on Thursday the 6th March, that member was acquitted: six of the other seven defendants pleaded guilty; and against the eighth, who went to trial, a verdict of guilty was returned by the jury.

It may be proper to add, that the whole of the proceedings were laid before the General Court of Proprietors, and the motion for their being printed was seconded by the member of the court who had been acquitted at the trial, and who entreated the proprietors to pass their judgment upon the papers.

On the 18th June the following motion was made in the General Court: "that the Court of Proprietors fully approve of the measures adopted by the Court of Directors, in bringing the case of an abuse of patronage before a legal tribunal; and although Captain Prescott appears to have "acted

“acted incautiously and imprudently, yet having been acquitted by the verdict of a jury of the charge preferred against him, and the proprietors being also satisfied that he was not actuated by any corrupt motive, they are not disposed to withdraw their confidence from him as a member of the executive body.”

After some discussion the consideration of the motion was deferred till the 2d July, on which day after a debate of some length, a ballot was demanded by sixteen members of the Court of Directors then present for the determination of the question; the said members abstaining from any expression of their sentiments on the question. The ballot took place on the 9th July, when there appeared to be:

For the question 408 votes.

Against the question 40

Majority for the question 368

The subject regarding East-India patronage, as connected with the introduction of the amended law of the 49th Geo. III. c. 126, has been thus fully detailed, in order to shew the sentiments entertained by Parliament as to the expediency of confining public inquiry to specific acts of abuse; and likewise the declared opinion of the Committee of the House of Commons in 1809, that throughout the evidence there was nothing to induce a reasonable suspicion that it was done with the privity or connivance of any member of the Court of Directors. In the conclusion of that Report the Committee observed, “it will depend upon the steps which may be taken in consequence of these inquiries, whether such abuses shall receive a permanent check or a virtual encouragement.”

So far as the Court of Directors are concerned, they have manifested a decided determination to put the most effectual check to such disgraceful practices. The sentiments of Mr. Justice Bayley, on passing sentence upon the defendants who were brought up for judgment on the 23d June 1828, are as follows. His Lordship observed, “it was a prosecution instituted by the East-India Company, and it being contrary to an act of Parliament now in force to negotiate upon the subject of an appointment of this description, it appeared to him

“ him, at least, that the East-India Company did right in endeavouring to sift the transaction to the bottom, and if possible to trace it to the fountain head; and they seem to have acted with an equal hand in that respect, having no regard either to high or low, for if criminality had attached to any one of their own body, they were desirous that it should meet the public eye and be subjected to reprobation.”

PRIZE MONEY.

On the 10th June 1828 Mr. Astell, chairman of the East-India Company, obtained leave to bring in a bill for the appropriation of certain unclaimed shares of prize money acquired by soldiers or seamen in the service of the Company, since the passing of the act in June 1821. All sums of money so paid over belonging to soldiers are to be applied to Lord Clive's Fund; those belonging to seamen to Poplar Hospital; subject, nevertheless, to be refunded without interest to any person or persons entitled to the same, and establishing his, her, or their claim or claims to the satisfaction of the Court of Directors of the East-India Company, or of the Governor and Council of the settlement wherein the same shall have been paid over to the Company. The bill was passed into a law on the 15th July.

REAL ESTATE LIABLE AS ASSETS.

ON the 23d June 1827, Mr. Fergusson brought under the consideration of the House of Commons, the state of the law in India respecting landed property in possession of British subjects there, and other matters within the jurisdiction of his Majesty's courts established within the territories of the East-India Company. As the law then stood, it appeared doubtful whether and to what extent the real estates of British subjects and others (not being Mahometans or Gentoos) situate within the limits before-mentioned, were liable as assets in the hands of executors and administrators to the payment of the debts of their deceased owners.

A motion was made for the appointment of a Select Committee to inquire into and report to the House upon the question. After some observations from Mr. Williams Wynn, the motion was withdrawn.

On the 25th March last Mr. Fergusson presented a petition from the British, native, and other inhabitants of Calcutta, in which the petitioners begged the attention of the House to the imperfect and unsettled state of the law on the subject. The petitioners likewise pointed out the want of a law regarding insolvent debtors in India. After some observations by several members, Mr. Williams Wynn stated, that he had paid attention to the subject of the law as to insolvent debtors shortly after his accession to the office of President of the Board of Commissioners, and expressed his readiness to afford every assistance in promoting the object regarding the law of real property in India.

The petition was then brought up and ordered to be printed, and leave was given to bring in a bill to explain and amend the law as to real property in India. The Bill was brought in and read the first time on the 16th May, and passed on Friday, the 13th June, after a clause had been inserted and agreed to, at the instance instance of Mr. Fergusson, declaring that nothing contained in the act was to have the effect of altering in any manner the character of property in India. The bill passed the House of Lords on the 14th, and received the royal assent on the 27th June.

(1) Whereas some doubts have arisen whether, and to what extent, the real estates of British subjects and others (not being Mahomedans or Gentoos), situate within or being under the jurisdiction of his Majesty's supreme courts of judicature in India, are liable, as assets in the hands of executors and administrators, to the payment of the debts of their deceased owners, and whereas it is expedient that such doubts should be removed; be it therefore, and it is hereby declared

(6) Provided nevertheless, and it is hereby declared and enacted, that neither this act, nor any thing herein contained, shall be construed to operate as or have the effect of changing or altering the legal quality, nature, or tenure of any lands, houses, estates, rights, interests, or any other subject of property whatsoever, or of making the same or any of them to be of the nature of real property, if by law, before the passing of this act, the same or any of them were personal property; but that the law in that respect shall be and continue the same as if this act had not passed.

This act not to alter the legal quality or tenure of any estates.

WRITERS.

IN page 168 of the Analysis, it was intimated that the probable demand of the civil service in India would exceed the means of supply, and consequently lead to some relaxation in the then existing law, which required that all persons, previously to their being appointed writers, should have resided four terms at college. In December 1825 the expediency of repealing the 45th section of the Act of the 53d Geo. III., cap. 155, was submitted by the Chairman of the Court of Directors to Mr. Williams Wynn, in consequence of which, Mr. Wynn, on the 26th March 1826, obtained leave to bring in a bill to suspend so much of the act of the 53d Geo. III. cap. 155, as related to the appointment of writers. After adverting to some of the causes which had occasioned a deficiency in the number of qualified persons, he observed, that the measure contemplated was not intended to imply any distrust of the system pursued at the East-India College; he believed that system had fully answered its purpose. Had the question related to the new constitution of the College, he should decidedly prefer its being assimilated to our existing universities, as he conceived it was much less advantageous to persons to be educated in classes than to be mixed together. At the same time, he considered it highly creditable to the College that in the short space of two years the students acquired so much.

Mr. Hume remarked, that the business of the College was better conducted now than formerly, still he felt called upon to express his decided conviction, that it never would answer the purpose for which it was originally intended.

Sir Thomas Baring stated, that a more perfect knowledge could be acquired of Hindoostannee by a six months' residence in India, than by two years' study in this country. He thought, upon the whole, that if individuals were allowed to receive their their education at such places as their parents or friends thought best, the Company would have the best guarantee that their servants would be educated and effective men. He hoped, therefore, that the alteration proposed would be made permanent.

Mr. Charles Grant trusted it would be made only a temporary measure. Adverting to the opposition which was offered to the College; and alluding to the irregularities stated to have occurred, he observed that they were not greater in number or degree than were to be met with in similar establishments. Since its foundation, a marked improvement had taken place in the conduct and character of the Company's servants in India. In 1810 Lord Minto spoke highly of its usefulness. A few years after Colonel Roebuck gave testimony of a similar character. The Marquess of Hastings had expressed, in the most unqualified terms, his approbation of the College; and his right hon. friend, who introduced the present measure, had stated that every communication he received from India more strongly convinced him of its usefulness. There appeared at first sight something plausible in the opinion, that a common education would be sufficient for every purpose: but this test could apply to nothing but literature; it could have no reference to scholastic discipline, to moral character, or propriety of conduct. When individuals spoke of the proficiency which a young man ought to obtain before he proceeded to India, he took it that they adverted to the lowest degree of proficiency to that which might be fixed as a minimum. Now it was quite evident that that minimum would be both the minimum and maximum. The present system, he conceived, was well calculated for sending out efficient servants to India; but if a better could be devised, be the expense of time or money what it might, he would certainly support it.

Dr. Phillimore believed that the College had fully completed the objects for which it was established, by furnishing India with a supply of well-educated young men. Never did any functionaries acquire more honour and credit than the young men sent from the College.

On the 28th of April, on the order of the day for the committal of the bill, Mr. Denman observed, that it was to remedy the evil of incompetent persons being sent out to India that the College was established, and in his opinion the experiment had fully answered. The requiring a certificate that parties had been properly educated had, in his opinion, a most beneficial effect in preventing incompetent persons from being sent out. He could have wished that the certificate had been incorporated in the bill itself.
to

Mr. Trant said, that all his experience contradicted the assertion that, previous to the establishment of the College, the persons sent out to India were uneducated. In his opinion, the civil service had been very little improved by the College, which he conceived had totally failed to answer the purpose for which it had been founded.

Mr. Secretary Canning said, that his concurrence in the bill was not founded in any apprehension that the temporary suspension of the qualification from the College would lead to the destruction of that institution. On the contrary, although in former times great men had appeared in India, yet the country had a right to expect that there should be some competent security for the cultivation and education to be possessed by those who were sent out to India. The nation had a deep interest in the question, and had a strict right to be assured that those who were destined for India should have some preparatory education previous to their departure. At the same time, if there could be a guarantee for the general education of those appointed to offices in India, he might hesitate between the present specific and a more general place of instruction; for he believed that, for all the purposes which men could be called upon to execute, the English gentleman's education was decidedly the best. But there were no means of obtaining this desirable object except by the test of examination: of these there were partialities, and a thousand other impediments to operate against the purity of such a test. With respect to the College, it appeared to him that, under circumstances of peculiar difficulty, it had been conducted with eminent credit to those to whom its management was intrusted, and with great utility to the public service. He was sorry that any cause had occurred for the temporary suspension of its powers, but in giving his support to the present measure, he could only give his pledge of honour that he had no such intention as to get rid of it altogether; and if there should be any change in its future management, it would only be the kind of change to which he had alluded, that of introducing a general system of education instead of the specific instruction, which was at present pursued.

Col. Baillie consented to the bill because he considered it expedient to supply the deficiencies of the public service. The regulations of the bill were not intended in the slightest degree to injure the College, but simply to provide a sufficient number of persons possessing the qualifications which were requisite for such institutions.

Mr. Williams Wynn, after stating the reasons why the present plan was the best that could be adopted, conceived that much advantage might be derived from the competition which it would create among the promoters of the different systems of education for young men proceeding to India. He could not see any reason why a young man, who had gone through the usual routine of a public school, and had afterwards applied himself at the universities or elsewhere to the study of the language of India, should not be equally well qualified for service in India with a young man educated at the College. He could not forget that one of the Company's most able servants, Warren Hastings, had been educated at Westminster school, in the same form with Lloyd and Churchill, and Cowper, and that he had retained the love of literature to the last. He proposed to pass the bill only for three years, in order that it might be then reconsidered at the end of that time, when the House had obtained further experience on the subject.

The act of the 7th Geo. IV, cap. 56, was accordingly passed, by which the provision before-mentioned was suspended, and persons are permitted to be sent out as writers on producing testimonials and passing an examination under certain rules and regulations framed by the Court subject to approval by the Board of Commissioners for the Affairs of India. No person can be appointed a writer whose age is less than eighteen, unless in the case of any student who shall have passed four terms at the East-India College prior to his having attained attained that age. The act continues in force for three years from the 26th May 1826, consequently its provisions cease on the 26th May 1829 unless the act be renewed. As the regulations were not framed when the act was printed, the Act and Regulations are now given at length.

c. 56.

REGULATIONS for Admission to the Civil Service of the East-India Company of Persons who have not resided at the East-India College; framed by the Court of Directors, and approved by the Board of Commissioners for the Affairs of India, in conformity with the provisions of the Act 7th Geo. IV. cap. 56.

That persons nominated writers, although they may not have been admitted at the East-India College, shall be deemed eligible for examination upon the production of the following certificates :

First. That the age is not less than eighteen nor more than twenty-two.

Second. Testimonials, upon honour, of good moral conduct, under the hand of the principal or superior authority of the college or public institution for instruction in which the nominee may have been educated; or if the nominee has not been educated in a public institution, then under the hand of the person or persons by whom the nominee may have been educated, for a period of not less than two years immediately preceding the time of presentation. The said testimonials to be such as shall be deemed satisfactory by the Court of Directors.

Third. A certificate from the Board of Examiners, to be appointed in manner hereinafter directed, shewing that the nominee has been examined and found qualified, agreeably to the test described in the paper hereunto annexed.

That a Board of four Examiners be appointed, two from the University of Oxford, and two from that of Cambridge, for the departments of Classics, Mathematics, and History.*

That Dr. Wilkins be appointed to examine such of the candidates as may present themselves for examination in the Oriental languages. That the examination in those languages shall for the present be optional, and confined to such of the nominees as shall voluntarily present themselves to undergo it.

That the Examiners meet half-yearly in London, at Lady-day and at Michaelmas, for the purpose of examining nominees.

Rank.—That all Writers who shall be found qualified under the foregoing regulations shall rank immediately after those who shall have proceeded from the East-India College at the preceding half-yearly examination, and that they shall be classed in such order as shall be determined by the Board of Examiners.

That the rank which may be assigned by the London Board of Examiners to persons appointed writers without having resided at the College, shall take effect only in the event of the writers proceeding to India within three months after they are so ranked; and that should any any writer delay so to proceed, he shall only take rank among the writers classed at the last examination previous to his departure for India, whether that examination may have been by the London Board of Examiners or by the College Council, and shall be placed at the end of that class in which rank was originally assigned to him.

Plan for the Examination of Candidates.

The candidates will be examined in the Greek Testament, and in some of the works of the following Greek authors, viz. Homer, Herodotus, Demosthenes, or in the Greek Plays; also in some of the works of the following Latin authors, viz. Livy, Cicero, Tacitus, and Juvenal, which part of the examination will include collateral reading in Ancient History, Geography, and Philosophy.

They will also be examined in Mathematics (including the four first and sixth Books of Euclid), Algebra, Plane Trigonometry, and Mechanics.

In Modern History, principally taken from "Russell's Modern Europe;" and in "Paley's Evidences of Christianity."

Test.—No candidate will be deemed qualified unless he be found to possess a competent knowledge of the Greek Testament, and of some portion of the works of at least two of the above-mentioned Latin authors (the particular works to be selected by the candidates, subject however to the previous approval of the examiner), and also of the principles of Grammar, the common Rules of Arithmetic, Vulgar and Decimal Fractions, the four first Books of Euclid, or the Elements of Algebra, including Simple Equations; it being understood that superior attainments in either of the departments of literature or science comprised in the foregoing plan of examination shall, at the discretion of the examiners, be considered to compensate for some deficiency in other of those departments.

These are the minima of qualification. The candidates so qualified will be classed in the order in which they reach higher degrees of attainment, and such classification will determine the relative rank in the service of the candidates when appointed Writers.

Notice.—Dr. Wilkins will attend at each examination, for the purpose of examining such of the candidates as may have previously signified their intention to present themselves to undergo an examination in the Oriental languages. A knowledge of two of those languages (of which the Hindoostanee or the Persian must be one) is an indispensable qualification in India, to enable a civil servant of the Company to fill official situations there: and although an examination in those languages will not at present be positively required in England for nominees not educated at the East-India College, yet such persons will essentially promote their own interests, by commencing in England the study of those languages, so as to pass an examination in this country, and prosecuting it during the voyage, and thereby qualifying qualifying themselves to pass in India the test required of all Writers previously to their being reported qualified for the public service.

Interpretation of the Test.—Every candidate is expected to be prepared for examination in the four Gospels in Greek, and two at least of the following portions of the Latin authors enumerated in the test. Three Books of Livy, eight Satires of Juvenal. In Cicero, an equivalent in quantity equal to the whole of the Offices. In Tacitus, an equivalent in quantity to the two first books of the Annals.

The examiners expect that each candidate should be prepared to answer questions respecting the Sacred History, and the Geography and Chronology connected with the events of the New Testament.

VOTES OF THANKS

BY THE

EAST-INDIA COMPANY.

WAR AGAINST AVA.

LORD AMHERST, SIR THOMAS MUNRO, SIR ARCHIBALD CAMPBELL, OFFICERS AND MEN, SIR JAMES BRISBANE, and the OFFICERS and CREW of HIS MAJESTY'S SHIPS.

At a GENERAL COURT held on Wednesday the 13th December 1826.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Court be given to the Right Honourable Earl Amherst, Governor-General, for his active, strenuous, and persevering exertions in conducting to a successful issue the late war with the Government of Ava, which was provoked by the unjust aggression of the enemy, prosecuted amid circumstances of very unusual difficulty, and terminated so as to uphold the character of the Company's Government, to maintain the British ascendant in India, and to impress the bordering states with just notions of the national power and resources.

Resolved unanimously, That the thanks of this Court be given to Major-General Sir Thomas Munro, Bart., K.C.B., for the alacrity, zeal, perseverance and forecast, which he so signally manifested throughout the whole course of the late war, in contributing all the available military and territorial resources of the Madras Government towards bringing it to a successful termination.

Resolved unanimously, That the thanks of this Court be given to Major-General Sir Archibald Campbell, K.C.B., for the skill, gallantry, and perseverance so conspicuously displayed by him in conducting the operations of the forces throughout the late arduous war, and which enabled him to surmount difficulties of no ordinary character, as well as for his judgment and forbearance in availing himself of every opening for negotiations which finally led to the happy termination of hostilities.

Resolved unanimously, That the thanks of this Court be given to the Brigadiers-General, Brigadiers, Field and other Officers of his Majesty's and the Company's Forces, both European and Native, for their gallant and meritorious conduct in the field throughout the late operations against the state of Ava.

Resolved unanimously, That this Court acknowledge and highly applaud the zeal, discipline, and bravery, together with the patient endurance of fatigue, privation, and sickness, displayed by the Non-commissioned Officers and Privates, both European and Native, employed against the Burmese; and that the thanks of the Court be signified to them by the Officers of their respective corps.

Resolved unanimously, That the thanks of this Court be given to Commodore Sir James Brisbane, C.B., and to the Captains and Officers of his Majesty's and the Company's ships who co-operated with the army in the Burmese war, for their cordial, zealous, and most useful exertions, and to the Crews of his Majesty's and the Company's ships and boats employed in the service, for their spirited and intrepid conduct on all occasions; and that the Commander of his Majesty's ships on the Indian station be requested to communicate the thanks of this Court to the Officers and Men under his command.

SIEGE OF BHURTPORE.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL IN COUNCIL, LORD COMBERMERE, GENERALS REYNELL and NICOLLS, and OFFICERS and MEN.

At a GENERAL COURT held on Tuesday the 19th December 1826.

Resolved, That the thanks of this Court be given to the Governor-General in Council, for his forbearance in not resorting to measures of coercion against the usurper of Bhurtpore, as long as hopes could reasonably be entertained of accomplishing, by means of negotiation, the restoration to power of the legitimate Rajah, and for his decision, on the failure of negotiations, to effect the reduction of that important fortress by force.

Resolved unanimously, That the thanks of this Court be given to General Lord Viscount Combermere, G.C.B., Commander-in-chief in India, India, for the judgment and skill with which he planned the siege of Bhurtpore, the operations of which, conducted by his Excellency in person, ended in the capture by storm of that fortress, before deemed impregnable by the natives, an achievement whereby the reputation and influence of the British power in India have been not only confirmed but most materially augmented.

Resolved unanimously, That the thanks of this Court be given to Majors-General Thomas Reynell, C.B., and Jasper Nicolls, who commanded the first and second divisions, for the eminent services which they rendered during the siege, and for the excellent dispositions which they made and personally directed for the assault of Bhurtpore.

Resolved unanimously, That the thanks of this Court be given to the Brigadiers-General, Brigadiers, Field and other Officers of his Majesty's and the Company's Forces, who served under General Lord Combermere at the siege of Bhurtpore, for their gallant and meritorious exertions.

Resolved unanimously, That this Court doth acknowledge and highly approve the discipline, steadiness, and valour displayed by the Non-commissioned Officers and Private Soldiers, both European and Native, employed in the siege of Bhurtpore, and that the thanks of this Court be signified to them by the Commanders of their respective corps.
